

HIGH POINT UNIVERSITY

Office of Global Education

May 21, 2019

To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is in support of Xinyi (Amy) He, a 2019 graduate of High Point University. I had the pleasure of being her international student advisor during her college years and I served as advisor for two of the organizations in which she was an active member – the Global Students Association and the Global Education Mentors/Cultural Acclimation Mentors.

As a student Amy began to shine during her junior year, when she found her niche in documentary media production. Her natural talent for storytelling combined with intercultural insight and knowledge of social trends gave her the raw tools needed for creating products that culminated in a departmental award for her senior project.

Amy's natural generosity is evident in everything she does. She volunteered for three years to serve as a mentor for new international students; during that time she did more than was required of her to help her mentees acclimate to life in the US. Having had that experience herself, she knew what was needed and became one of our strongest mentors. In her senior year she was the nucleus of an exceptionally close-knit group of students from all around the world, and they owe much to her skills in organizing events, her willingness to reach out to those who were less outgoing, and her innate sense of fun. These are capabilities that will easily transfer to whatever career she pursues.

If a company is seeking a creative employee who is open to mentorship, who has a growth mindset and a belief in herself, Amy He is an excellent choice. She sees possibilities where others might see obstacles, and searches for the tools that she needs in order to complete her goals. Her experience as an international student living in the US, learning a second language, and acclimating to a culture that is very different from her own is just one of the proofs of her ability to adapt and grow in whatever situation in which she finds herself.

Sincerely,

Dr. Marjorie Church
PDSO, Director of International Student Affairs